General comments
José Carlos Pires Carneiro is linked to companies responsible for "colonization" processes in the central-western part of the country during the Brazilian military dictatorship (1964-1985), being one of the owners of Tapiraguaia Agrícola e Pecuária (1). Frenova is linked with a "colonization" company in Confresa, needs more investigation to understand whether they are still present in the properties or if they were recently sold to someone else (2). Frenova is one of the companies that contested the demarcation of Terra Indígena Urubu Branco in Goiás, Tocantins and Maranhão - needs more investigation to confirm that this is the same company (3). In the 1980s, indigenous organisations denounced the invasion of indigenous lands – currently Terra Indígena Urubu Branco – of the Tupinaré people José Carlos Pires Carneiro, owner of the Tapiraguaia Farm in the northeast of the state of Mato Grosso (4).
